Republicans Get 11 Governors, 78 in House, 8 in Senate

Democrats Apparently Nose Out Victories in Indiana, Iowa

GILLETTE IS WINNER Saves Democrats in Iowa—Van Nuys Edges Ahead in Indiana

The Democratic and Republican parties began a two-year struggle for power Thursday as the aftermath of the political unravel in Tuesday's election.

With 11 new governorships, 8 new senate seats, and at least 78 more house seats firmly in their grasp, the Republicans turned from ballot-counting with the avowed intention of trying to take over the presidency.

There was only one major race not definitely decided Thursday, and that appeared to be going Democratic—the contest in Indiana, where Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Democrat, pulled slightly ahead of Raymond Willis, Republican. The few unreported precincts were located in counties in which the Democrat has been running ahead.

After a see-saw battle, Senator Guy M. Gillette, Democrat, apparently won re-election in Iowa, where revisions in unofficial vote tabulations increased his lead over former Senator Lester J. Dickinson, Republican.

Van Nuys Wins Out INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—(AP)—Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Democrat, appeared re-elected Thursday in a close contest with Raymond E. Willis, Republican.

Van Nuys had a lead of more than 2,000 votes, with only scattered precincts in counties in which he has been running ahead, yet to report.

Despite Chaos 20 Years Since Armistice Masses of People Are Better Off Today

5 Proposals Lose Definitely in Vote

Acts 1 and 8, Amendment 30 Are Trailing Less Decisively

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Five proposals submitted to Arkansas voters in Tuesday's general election were running behind in tabulations made by the Associated Press Wednesday night. The returns were from 1,191 of the 2,002 precincts in the state.

Hopelessly defeated were proposed Amendment 25 which would have abolished the state's poll tax and proposed Amendment 28 which would have set out a plan for refunding the state's highway bonds.

The vote on No. 26 was: For... 26,694 Against... 56,971 Majority against... 27,277

For... 24,960 Against... 58,218 Majority against... 33,240

Three other proposals were running behind on the face of incomplete returns but not so hopelessly. These were:

Act No. 1 to make it easier to hold local option elections. Act No. 8 requiring the state to take over debts of bridge districts. Amendment 30 which would make the State Education Board elective instead of appointive.

The vote on these: No. 1: For... 38,368 Against... 45,575 Majority against... 7,207

No. 8: For... 37,237 Against... 45,575 Majority against... 3,242

Amendment 30: For... 39,423 Against... 42,215 Majority against... 3,792

All the other proposals on the ballot had substantial leads.

These were as follows: Amendment 24 to give Chancery courts jurisdiction of matters now handled in Probate Court. 47,514 Against... 32,558 Majority for... 14,956

Amendment 25 to permit counties to issue bonds to build hospitals. For... 44,651 Against... 33,767 Majority for... 11,084

Amendment 27 to permit the legislature to pass a workmen's compensation act. For... 54,803 Against... 26,918 Majority for... 27,885

Amendment 29 to permit certain tax exemptions to new industries. For... 49,347 Against... 30,747 Majority for... 18,600

A Thought Next to God, thy parents.—Penn.

Shoeless and Ragged Peasant Vanishes in Civilized Areas

Rising Tide of Government Power Continues to Make Inroads on Private Business

This is the fourth of five articles reviewing the historic 20 years since the Armistice.

By WILLIS THORNTON NEA Service Staff Correspondent

The pre-war world believed pretty strongly in two things: (1) That private ownership of the means of producing things, and private management of their production in free competition led to the best results for most men.

(2) That the freest possible exchange of these goods between countries, with certain tariff restrictions, would make for the welfare of peoples and better world understanding.

Both assumptions have been challenged, the first by the rise of socialist and quasi-socialist economies, the second by the idea of national self-sufficiency.

First fruits of the World war were the Russian revolution, and the first widespread attempt at a socialist state. Foreign debts were repudiated and foreign investments and property confiscated by Russia without compensation. The Particularist socialist sect called the Communists took charge of the experiment.

After 20 years the socialist world is scarcely less divided than the capitalist as to the success of the Russian experiment. But there it stands, and the 20 post-war years have thus been the first great challenge to the individualistic and private-ownership principle, at one-time viewed as the last word in progress.

The debt-repudiation of the Russian revolution was a mere forerunner of a series of repudiations by the greatest world powers.

Germany, saddled with a huge reparations bill, soon fell down on payments, despite several downward revisions. Even French occupation of the Rhineland in 1923 as a retaliation for failure of reparations did not solve the problem. The Germans could not pay (as many economists insist) or would not pay (as others believe), but at any rate they did not pay.

This disease was catching. Of the billions loaned by the United States to governments in the World war, almost nothing has been returned. Cuba is the only country which paid its debt in full; Finland is the only one that has kept up its payments.

Even after funding the debts, 11 billions of dollars are now generally regarded as beyond recovery.

Following Russia's revolution, the revolutions in Germany and Italy, though they spawned a different order than that of Russia, nevertheless produced economic orders that have points similar to it. In these countries, as in Russia, control if not actual ownership of economic activity passed to the central government in the hope that planned decisions by a central group would produce and distribute plenty, where the aggregate individual decisions of millions of enterprisers and producers had not.

Nazis Strike Jews; Turk Leader Dies

Mustapha Kemal, Man Who Westernized Turkey, Dies at 58

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels Thursday issued a brief appeal to the German populace to desist from further anti-Jewish demonstrations.

By the Associated Press Angry demonstrators took a violent revenge on Jews in Germany Thursday for the slaying of a German diplomat in Paris by a young Polish Jew.

Crowds charged a police guard and plundered shattered Berlin Jewish shops. Seven of Berlin's 20 synagogues were set afire, and others were burned and wrecked in Munich, Dresden, Vienna, Cologne and Hamburg.

All of Vienna's 21 synagogues were damaged or destroyed, and Vienna Jews said 22 of their number committed suicide while Nazi fury avenged the death of Ernst von Rath, secretary of the Paris embassy, who died Wednesday.

Grief struck Turkey, where President Kemal Ataturk, hard-fisted, hard-living "gray wolf," who forged a new Western state out of the war-crushed ruins of the Ottoman empire, finally succumbed to a long illness. He was 58 years old.

In the Spanish civil war, government armies reported advances on the far northern Segre river front. The insurgents said all lost territory had been recaptured, and reported gains in their drive to wipe out the government's Ebro river salient.

The vanguard of Japan's army in central China reached Yochow after an all-night march.

When the smoke of Ghazi Mustapha Kemal Pasha's six-shooter reform gun died away, history saw through the sensationalism of fleeing sultans and caliphs, of crashing mosques and harems, of torn fezzes and veils, a man of two outstanding achievements.

His first was the creation of a republic out of the dying scrap of a dead empire. His second was the training of citizens to make that republic live.

The independent westward-looking Turkish republic of today was fashioned out of the post-war remains of a somnolent oriental empire that had once stretched from the Adriatic to the Red Sea, largely by the will and the luck of one man, Mustapha Kemal.

A general in the army of the Ottoman Empire, he was sent by the puppet Sultan, Vahideddin, to quell the mutiny that was threatening in Sivas in 1919, just at the time when Turkey's defeat in the World war and the partition of her territory among the victorious allies, had brought the nation to the blackest page of its long history.

Instead of quelling the mutiny, Kemal became its leader, raised a nationalist army among the discontented element of Anatolia, grinned when the Sultan declared him an outlaw, set up an opposition government in Ankara composed of a National Assembly with himself as president, fought and beat the Greek army which had

Nashville Man Is Hurt Seriously in Wreck Near Hope

Luther Jones, 35, in Accident on Paved Hope-Fulton Road

IN HOSPITAL HERE

Auto Leaves Road and Plunges Down High Embankment

Luther Jones, 35, manager of the Nashville, Ark., Temple Cotton Oil company plant and general gin repair man for the Temple company plants in southwest Arkansas, was seriously injured late Wednesday when the automobile he was driving left the road and plunged down a high embankment seven miles west of Hope.

A Hope Furniture company ambulance brought Jones to Julia Chester hospital where a physician said he sustained a badly lacerated scalp, serious chest injury and possibly other injuries. Mr. Jones was unable to undergo X-ray examinations Thursday morning.

His family came here from Nashville to be with him. He was driving alone at the time of the accident, en route from Fulton to Hope. Particulars as to the cause of the mishap could not be learned. An ambulance driver said he received the emergency call about 7:45 p. m.

The car left the paved highway and turned over several times in rolling down the embankment, at a point said to be the steepest between Hope and Fulton.

A wrecker picked up the damaged car and carried it to Nashville. Mr. Jones has lived at Nashville several years.

New Dodge Shown in Hope Thursday

1939 "Luxury Liner" Reflects Sweeping Changes—25th Anniversary

The 1939 Dodge was put on display at B. R. Hamm Motor company showrooms Thursday.

Details of the 1939 line of Dodge passenger automobiles will be read with considerable interest, because of earlier reports hinting at style surprises and mechanical innovations, and also because this newest of Dodge cars is the company's Silver Anniversary model to which engineers, style leaders and production experts, stimulated no doubt by extra pride and sentiment, are said to have devoted their utmost skill and effort.

The gracefully proportioned rear sweep of the all-steel bodies completely conceals a 27 per cent larger luggage compartment. The driving compartment is clear of gear shift and parking brake levers. It is evident that Dodge designers have made a clean break with the past and now introduce in their Silver Anniversary Luxury Liner an entirely new, ultra-modern car of remarkable attraction.

The new Dodge is longer in wheelbase and wider in body, two circumstances which in addition to contributing to impressive appearance, have been turned to fullest advantage in the interiors—in wider seats, increased leg and elbow space, and in markedly greater visibility. As if to crown so much newness, the manufacturers are finishing the bodies in a newly perfected enamel in a wide variety of optional colors.

In designing the chassis of the new Dodge Luxury Liner, engineers provided a new frame with 6-inch side members. The greatest change is noted in the heavier front end of the new frame, which now accommodates an individual-action front-wheel suspension incorporating special-type tempered, tough yet resilient coil springs of Amola, the sensational new steel also used extensively in the manufacture of Dodge wheel shafts, transmission and drive gears, and in many other vital parts. In securing the closest approach to ideal weight distribution, the front and rear seats are located in the cradled area between

Racial Origins Must Be Forgotten in America

If Americans were shocked and saddened by the dissection of Czechoslovakia, they ought to be almost equally careful not to let the principle on which that dissection was based become established in their own land.

The principle is simple. It is that the ties of "race" are both permanent and all-important; that a man is, for all time, what his ancestors were, no matter where he may go or what he may do; and that no right of society or claim of economics can prevail against that reality.

That is about as dangerous a piece of dynamite as could well be introduced into American life. For if there is one spot on earth where the whole structure of society rests on the exact opposite of that theory, the United States is it.

So it is extremely discouraging to read of the little brush which Gov. Lehman of New York has been having with the Ukrainians of that state.

The Ukrainian-American Democratic Club recently bolted the state ticket—on the ground that although the Ukrainians cast 125,000 votes in New York elections, only five persons of Ukrainian extraction held political office. The president of the organization declared that in addition to patronage his people want representation in party councils in proportion to their voting strength.

Now it is no great jump from that position to the position of the Sudeten Germans in Mr. Beres's Czechoslovakia. The original complaint of the Sudeten Germans—that they were not given state offices in proportion to their strength—is almost precisely like this complaint. And although it is a little hard to imagine Messrs. Hitler and Chamberlain hot-footing it across the Atlantic to see that the downtrodden Ukrainians get justice from brutal Uncle Sam, the parallel is an ominous thing just the same.

That insistence on the importance of racial origins wrecked Czechoslovakia. It could wreck America just as neatly, if it were carried far enough. And before it is carried any farther, all who believe that the unity of the nation is worth saving ought to express themselves in unmistakable terms.

We have in America people from every nation on earth. The only possible way for us to even to come close to order and progress is to insist that diverse racial origins are of no importance whatever. They may have a sentimental meaning, to be sure—but absolutely nothing beyond that.

That is a lesson that we thought we had learned a century ago. Apparently it needs to be learned again. For this emphasis on the importance of race is the subtlest and most dangerous thing that could possibly arise in American life. Unless it is stamped out we are in for the worst kind of trouble.

Suitable Diet for Mothers Requires Careful and Intelligent Attention

A mother usually gains about 14 per cent in weight. Most authorities are agreed that she requires for her nutrition only the foods which have usually been eating, providing her diet is satisfactory, but that she needs more of everything, particularly more proteins which build tissues, more calcium and phosphorus which are concerned with the development of bones, more iron for the building of blood, more vitamins to prevent any deficiency diseases, and more energy simply because of the increased requirements on her body.

Provided that the mother is well during the period preceding her hospital trip the only attention she needs to give to her protein diet is the choice of those which have what we call a high biologic value. It is known that such proteins are more important than those without this value. The protein that is especially important are those of milk and meat, whereas those of cereals and vegetables and fruits are less important.

It has been found that many different factors will influence the amount of calcium and phosphorus that are absorbed by the body. It is necessary to take a certain amount of vitamin D in order to get the body to use enough calcium and phosphorus. However, if her diet contains enough milk and green vegetables she will have enough calcium and phosphorus, but unless the rest of her diet is properly developed she will not utilize the calcium and phosphorus satisfactorily. There seems to be no lack of evidence that our diets are low in iron. As a result of this deficiency of iron, there is a tendency toward the development of mild forms of anemia. Such a condition is extremely important in mothers. Some studies have shown that iron is better absorbed when it is taken in the diet along with plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables. It is also believed that a sufficient amount of vitamin C is necessary in the diet for suitable absorption of iron.

One shall that is of great importance is iodine. It has been shown by innumerable experiments that failure to provide the mother with sufficient iodine will not only be serious for her but also for the child.

Nowadays everyone recognizes the importance of vitamins. Those with which we are particularly concerned in relationship in this article are vitamins A, B1, C and D. Repeatedly it has been pointed out in this column that an insufficient amount of vitamin A tends to lessen the resistance of the body, that a deficiency of vitamin B1 is associated with various disorders of digestion and with a lack of appetite.

In most cases the diet will be satisfactory if it contains enough milk, green and yellow vegetables, fresh uncooked fruits and a moderate amount of meat. The diet will not be satisfactory if it is restricted largely to refined cereal foods, manufactured and dried food products and sugar. Providing a suitable diet is not an intricate, scientific matter, but it does take careful and intelligent attention.

Some getting is losing, you understand. Some hoarding is far from saving. What you hold in your hand may slip from your hand; There is something better than having. We are richer for what we give; And only by giving, we live.

Selected.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Johnson and little son, Jerry have returned from a visit with the Johnson relatives in Mississippi points, and Memphis, Tenn.

The November meeting of the John Cain chapter, D. A. R. was held on Wednesday with a 12:45 luncheon at Hotel Barlow, with Mrs. Dan Green, Mrs. J. J. Battle and Mrs. E. F. McFaddin as hostesses. The 23 members and guests were seated at one large round table, covered with handsome damask and centered with a huge bowl of yellow and white chrysanthemums, surrounded by yellow and white candles alternating in green holders. The meeting opened with the regent, Mrs. Chas. Locke leading in the salute to the flag followed by the impressive opening ritual and the Lord's prayer. Mrs. Battle introduced her guests as follows: Mrs. J. T. West, Mrs. Randolph Hamby of Prescott, Mrs. Wells Hamby also of Prescott, and regent for the Benjamin Culp chapter, Mrs. N. B. Bracy, Miss Maggie Bell, Mrs. Ernest Cox Fulton, Mrs. Futrell, Steens, Ark and Mrs. Sid Henry. Mrs. E. F. McFaddin introduced her mother, Mrs. Mittie McCannon of Fort Worth, Texas, and Mrs. Ross R. Gillespie, city. The regular routine of business, including the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting by Mrs. J. M. Houston and treasurer's report by Mrs. R. E. Cain. Dues were collected for the ensuing year. Mrs. J. J. Battle, chairman on the correct use of the flag, reported that prizes had been offered for the best essay on the Correct Use of the Flag and that all schools in the county are participating in this patriotic educational program.

Mrs. R. E. Cain, Ellis Island chairwoman, reported on the work of the D. A. R. at this gateway into the nation. Mrs. Wells Hamby, regent, Benjamin Culp chapter, Prescott, brought greetings and told of the work being done in her chapter. Mrs. Wilbur Jones, registrar, reported on the papers of two prospective members. Mrs. Chas. Haynes, discussed Armistice day, and brought much interest into the discussion by asking each person present to relate their reactions to the news of the Armistice twenty years ago, when all had hoped that wars were over forever, yet 3,000,000 persons have given up their lives on battle fields scattered over the earth since we had hoped "The world was safe for democracy."

Mrs. J. M. Houston, program leader for the afternoon gave a splendid review of "The Raven," by Marquis James, the life of General Sam Houston, whose Indian name, "Koileta," meant "the Raven." Houston's life, that of a stormy patriot's always, did more to shape the destinies of the Southwest, especially Texas than any other single influence. Mrs. Haynes told of his home in Marion, Ala.

The closing ritual with the singing of America, with Mrs. Wilbur Jones at the piano closed the meeting. The next meeting will be on December 14, with Mrs. J. M. Houston, Mrs. R. E. Cain and Mrs. Lee Holt as hostesses, and Mrs. R. L. Seay leading.

Friends will regret to know that Miss Mabel Heyworth is reported ill at her home 217, South River street.

The Daily Revue of the Louisiana State University carries a very attractive picture of Miss Lenora Rounton president of Theta Sigma Phi, honorary journalism group presenting a gold gavel of leadership to Mrs. Blanche LeCoe of New Roads, president of the Louisiana Press association. Holy Land Movies Here November 17

Rev. W. R. Hamilton to Show Them at First Baptist Church

Next Thursday night, November 17, the Rev. W. R. Hamilton will present the first of a series of three motion picture travelogues on the Holy Land at First Baptist church.

The first travel picture, entitled "Mediterranean Borderlands" will be given this month. The local pastor plans to give the second picture next spring and the third one sometime during the summer.

"Mediterranean Borderlands" was filmed by Mr. Hamilton on a cruise to the Holy Land. These pictures have been shown to large and appreciative audiences in many sections of the United States. Thrilling closeups of Mt. Vesuvius, picturesque shots of Algeria, intimate studies of the Parthenon at Athens, and dramatic scenes in Egypt combine to make the picture one of rare interest to all classes. Countries pictured include the Azores, Portugal, Algeria, Italy, Sicily, Greece, Turkey, Palestine, and Egypt.

Pardon For Mooney

on prejured testimony and false evidence" and did not believe Mooney was guilty.

"Therefore, it must be clear to anyone," Olson said, "that I will approach the consideration of Mooney's application for pardon with these convictions, giving opportunity to any and all entitled to a hearing to show cause to me why I, as governor, should not pardon him."

Olson said Wednesday he expected to advocate modified angles of Upton Sinclair's program of production-for-use for the unemployed.

"We will offer every aid and encouragement to self-help co-operatives," he said.

Sinclair urged direct state financing to enable all unemployed to produce and exchange goods for their own use.

Olson also indicated there may be a state clean-up investigation similar to that initiated by Los Angeles' new mayor, Fletcher Bowron.

Democratic liberals claimed wide gains on the Pacific coast in election returns. Republicans swept Oregon, however, and threatened to break the solid New Deal congressional bloc in Washington state.

California rejected the $30-a-year Thursday pension plan, and Oregon voters apparently turned down a proposal to inaugurate the Townsend plan with $100 monthly payments.

Washington and California defeated measures which would have curbed drastically the activities of unions on strike, particularly picketing, jurisdictional disputes and boycotts, but a similar measure was running ahead in Oregon, scene last year of a bitter struggle between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

New Deal Senator Williams Gibbs McAdoo, who lost his race for renomination to Sheridan Downey, $30 pension advocate and the winner today, resigned as of today and Republican Gov. Frank F. Merriam, whom Olson defeated, appointed Democrat Thomas M. Storke, Santa Barbara newspaper publisher, to fill the Senate seat until Downey takes office January 3.

Virtually complete defeat for the New Deal was indicated in Oregon, where Republican Rufus Holman had a big lead over Democrat Willis E. Mahoney for the senatorship, and Republican Charles A. Sprague was receiving about 1½ votes to every one for Democrat Henry L. Hess, who was endorsed for governor by Secretary Ickes and Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska independent.

Senator Homer T. Bone, New Deal supporter, was re-elected in Washington over Republican Ewing D. Colvin. There was no governorship contest. All of Washington's six New Deal congressmen appeared safe from defeat except Democrat Knute Hill who was trailing Republican Frank Miller in the Fourth district.

litical, each country tried to produce what it needed, with as little trade as possible. Surpluses were dumped on the world market regardless of cost, throwing out of gear the economies of those countries which were still operating in what had been a comparatively open market. Totalitarian countries found an advantage in international trade because they could deal, subsidize, and high-pressure buyers and sellers on a scale impossible to countries whose trade was being carried on by individuals.

Money lost some of the meaning it had to the pre-war generation. Russia and Germany swept the boards clear and began over again after inflation that destroyed all values, all savings. France three times devalued its money, reducing savings by that much. Even in the United States it was conceded that dollar devaluation in terms of gold, though it reduced the government's expressly-pledged word, was best for the great majority of the people.

Eight years of grinding depression failed to swing the great majority of American sentiment away from individual ownership and enterprise. But the swing toward centralization was marked.

Labor, always before the World war hostile to any government dictation of working conditions, turned to the NRA, the National Labor Relations Act, and to Wage and Hour legislation for security in addition to its own bargaining and organizational power.

People generally have turned to their federal government for help as never before. That includes elderly people who want pensions, World war veterans who asked and got a billion and a half-dollar payoff, bankers who wanted loans, farmers who wanted

Death Toll From Accidents In the Home Arouses Nation

A potential victim is the housewife who uses cleaning fluid near the open flame of her kitchen stove.

THE dangers that lurk in the home have only been brought forcibly to the attention of the public within the past two years, through activity of the American Red Cross and other safety agencies. Public attention has been concentrated in greater degree upon the upward trend of the death toll from motor accidents. In 1937 motor vehicle accidents claimed 39,500 lives. Accidents in the home claimed 32,500 lives.

The people who lost their lives within the four walls of their homes were victims principally of the following: falls, 17,500 dead; burns and explosions, 5,600 dead; poison, 1,700 dead; firearms, 800 dead; mechanical suffocation, 1,000 dead; all other causes 4,800 dead. In addition about 4,700,000 persons were injured.

All of these deaths were preventable, according to the American Red Cross, which urges every family in the home and on the farm to check each October a list of hazards issued by the Red Cross, and to follow simple precautionary rules.

Falls claim the lives of aged people in a ratio of 60 per cent to the total annual death toll from this cause; two-thirds of fatal burns occur in the home; children are the chief victims of accidental poisonings in the home. These startling facts should make every householder look into the safety of his home, the Red Cross warns.

is sure and steady, and free from vibration. The steering basically of the worm-and-roller-tooth type, is said to be 28 per cent easier, due to mechanical features and to a change in steering ratio from 14.6 to 15.2.

How to See Football

By JERRY BRONDFIELD
NEA Service Sports Writer

When football leaders legalized the forward pass in 1906 it took some of the mayhem out of the game, little did they dream that the maneuver would open the way for some of the most thrilling plays on the gridiron.

The Benny Friedmans, the Sammys Baughs, and the Sid Luckmans have made it possible for smaller, weaker teams to upset the big-timers with greater ease than ever.

Stopping a strong passing attack today is quite a job, because no less than six men on the offensive team may be directly involved in an aerial, with any of them being eligible to receive the ball.

The eligible receivers are the two players on the ends of the line—whether they be the ends themselves, or any one who assumes the positions as in trick plays—or the four men in the backfield.

Great pass receivers like Benny Osterbaum, Don Hutson and Gaynell Tinsley can make life miserable for the defense. They have the added advantage of knowing where they're going when the play starts, while the defense must diagnose the play, at least briefly, so as to not to act too hastily.

Larry Gilbert to Manage Nashville

Veteran New Orleans Pilot Will Become Part Owner of Vols

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—Larry Gilbert, veteran manager of the New Orleans Pelicans, Tuesday was named skipper of the Nashville Vols. In announcing Gilbert's appointment, Fay Murray, president of the Nashville club of the Southern Association, said the new pilot would become a part owner.

Long a favorite with Pelican fans, Gilbert was signed by New Orleans as a pitcher in 1910, later became an outfielder and played with the Boston Braves in the National League in 1914 and 1915. He returned to New Orleans as a player in 1917 and was made manager in 1923. He has directed the club ever since.

Gilbert succeeds Charlie Dressen, who piloted the Vols into second place last season and was signed as a coach by the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League several weeks ago.

Murray said in announcing the signing of Gilbert "it was necessary for him to own a very substantial interest in the club" and disclosed that Gilbert would purchase the interest of Jimmy Hamilton.

Murray's statement said in part: "As it has always been my desire to furnish the loyal fans and supporters of Nashville the best in baseball, I was willing to make most any concession to secure Gilbert's services and I think the public will agree that we have secured the most outstanding man."

Gilbert is so well and favorably known that it is not necessary for me to add anything."

Could Not Refuse Nashville's Offer Says Gilbert

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—Larry Gilbert, manager of the New Orleans Pelicans baseball club, said Tuesday night he had accepted an offer to become vice president and manager of the Nashville (Tenn.) club.

"The offer from Nashville was one I could not afford to turn down," Gilbert said. "I have a chance to make here three times the money I make here—an assurance I will make twice as much. Seymour Weiss, president of the Pelicans, and his associates would be foolish to even try to come close to the offer."

"Larry's leaving us was not a matter of salary," Weiss said. "We would have no salary offer. His proposition of becoming part-owner of the Nashville team was one we could not meet."

Nashville Scrappers, Coach Given Banquet

NASHVILLE, Ark.—Coach Bo Sherman and his Nashville Scrappers were honored with a banquet at the Coca-Cola bottling plant in this city Tuesday night, given jointly by a number of local football fans.

Throughout the evening, musical selections were rendered by a composition string band from Nashville and Saratoga.

The table was centered with two large cakes, one bearing the inscription "Scrappers," and the other, "1938." Captain Eulis Rosson was given the honor of cutting the Scraper cake, while Coach Sherman applied the knife to the other.

After a tempting and bountiful dinner, the guests were treated with an inspirational speech by C. G. Hughes, president of the Nashville school board. Captain Rosson also gave a brief talk in behalf of the team.

To top off the entertainment, Coach Sherman and his boys gave a vocal rendition of "Shell Be Coming 'Round the Mountain," followed by 15 rousing cheers, led by Yell Leader Marie Hallmark, for the team, coach, dinner and band.

tion, and demanded action of directors that would speed definite plans. Sanford, who holds the charter of the association and a six-year lease on the vast Cotton Bowl Stadium, said he would return both over to the association if it would, in turn, guarantee the annual appearance of the conference champion and name him director-general for a three-year term.

Gloyd Lyon Slated Take Eakin's Post

Thomsen Works Razorbacks on Offensive Drills for SMU Game

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—The search for a successor to the injured Kay Eakin in the University of Arkansas backfield became a serious matter Tuesday, as Coach Fred C. Thomsen ran his Razorbacks through a long scrimmage in preparation for the game with the Southern Methodist Mustangs in Dallas Saturday. With only Wednesday left for heavy work, Thomsen must determine by Wednesday night who Arkansas's next triple-threatener will be.

Satisfied with a rugged defense which in losing Saturday's game kept the Rice Owls of the 30-yard zone, Thomsen devoted his drills today almost entirely to offense. With giant tackles such as Jim Carter and Saul Singer delivering when the other team has the ball, the Razorback mentor is worried only with the problem of opening holes in the opposing line.

At least two sophomores are being considered as successors to Eakin. Joe Seale, 180-pounder from Hartford, and A. E. Mitchell Jr., 170-pounder from Rogers, are getting their chances in passing and ball-carrying. However, until one shows sufficient ability to necessitate a definite change in plans, Junior Halfback Gloyd Lyons added experience gives him the inside track.

W. B. Owen, senior reserve guard, may see some action against the Methodists. He has been out with a knee injury since the Santa Clara game. Estes McDaniel, sophomore fullback, is out again and probably will be on the sidelines until near the end of the season.

occupied Smyrna had invaded western and central Anatolia, and finally forced the allies to agree to a new peace settlement at Lausanne, the terms to be discussed not with the sultan but with himself. Then to abolish the dual government, he deposed the sultan, who fled to Malta on a British warship, November 17, 1922.

A year later the National Assembly at Angora declared Turkey a republic and Kemal its first president, with Angora as its capital. Thus after four years of "outlawry" in wild Asia Minor, the man who was once a servant of the Ottoman house ended a dynasty which had ruled Turkey for 600 years.

Kemal had created a republic. His next job was to fashion citizens, unless that republic were to be as ephemeral as the "constitutional monarchy" which had been the brief boast of the Union and Progress party of the Young Turks, the party which had committed suicide when it plunged Turkey into the great war.

To turn thirteen million tyrannical and tradition-ridden Turks into citizens of a republic, Kemal began a series of occidentalizing reforms, sensational enough to be dubbed not so much a "western" as a "wild-western" movement. But underneath the noise, he worked methodically. He did not turn his Turks inside out, he changed the mfrom outside, in.

In the westernization of externals, he aimed to give his people self-respect, to make them realize that they were just the same human beings as those gods of independence and progress, the men of the western world.

A typical act in this endeavor was changing the name of Constantinople to the old Turkish title, Istanbul. This removed an historic reminder of the days when occidentals ruled on the Bosphorus. It served also to bolster Turkish nationalist feeling.

Kemal aimed, too, to impress upon the western world the fact that the Turks were humans, and not be-frenzied and be-bloomered caricatures. So he ordered fezzes off and hats on.

SATURDAY morning Judy Alcott awoke with a heavy sense of something unpleasant impending. And then she remembered. Today was the day she was going with Dwight to meet his fiancée.

Dwight came for her at a quarter of ten. He was radiant, and his gladness was an added affront. But she tried hard to act glad, too. Only, sitting beside him on the way to Lindbergh Field, she couldn't help remembering their dates, the way they had kissed.

She had no business to feel this way about a man who was going to marry somebody else.

Lindbergh Field, one of the largest in the country, had once been an Experimental Navy Field, she remembered. She looked at the administration buildings, at the wide expanse of landing area, and at the three huge airliners lined up behind the wire fence.

Diane was always saying she wished Bill had a nice, safe transport job. But it wasn't really safe, either, Judy knew. A man in pilot's gray came out of one of the ships. Judy wondered if his wife, too, worried when he was away. Diane made light of it, but Judy knew how the dark night hours tormented her when the fleet was away at sea.

With Dwight, an engineering officer on a battleship, Marvel would never have to worry. Judy hated herself for the way her eyes clung to him. She didn't want to see his lean, graceful height, she didn't want to see the way his eyes were alight with happiness. If that smile were for her—but it wasn't.

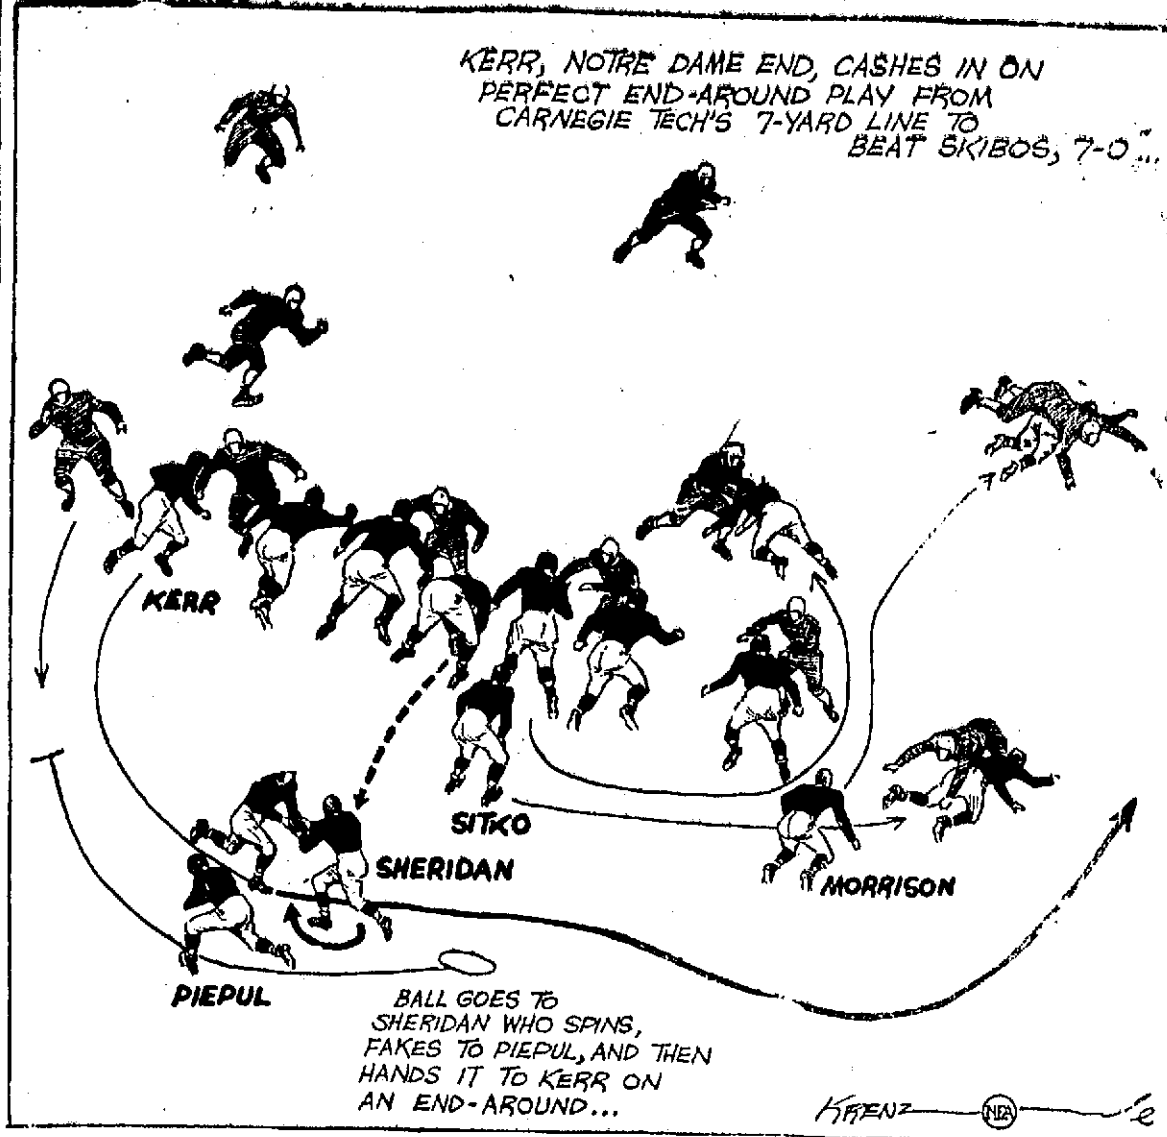

"Steady, Judy," she said to herself.

AT ten thirty the great silver ship came out of the sky and circled for a landing. They watched it, powerful, swift, beautiful beyond description. And then it was taxiing to the apron, and almost as soon as the propellers stopped whirling, the cabin door was flung open and on the steps the porter had rolled up, a girl was standing.

She would be the first one out, Judy thought.

She had red hair, this vision in the cabin door. A trim tailored suit, a magnificent silver fox, and took the ball from Sheridan, who then faked off to the left. Sisko, quarterback, took out Tech's left end, Morrison, right halfback, went down to get the defensive fullback. Notre Dame's right end handled the defensive left tackle. The right guard pulled out and blocked the line-backer.

Notre Dame set up a perfect end-around play in the final period of its game with Carnegie Tech in South Bend to drive across the goal from the Skibos seven-yard line for a 7-0 victory.

Kerr swept wide around Carnegie's left end and sprinted to the corner without having a hand laid on him.

Wearing Marshmallow Topper, Gingerbread Goes High Hat

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

NRA Service Staff Writer
Even a cake can get dizzy. Imagine frosted gingerbread going high hat. Rather delicious fun!

Gingerbread High Hats
One-half cup shortening, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 beaten egg, 1 cup New Orleans molasses, 2 1/2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon ginger, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/2 teaspoon cloves, 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg, 1 cup boiling water.
Cream shortening and sugar until fluffy. Add beaten egg and molasses and mix smooth. Alternate flour, which has been sifted with soda, salt and spices, with the boiling water. Beat until smooth.

Place in greased and floured pan about 3 inches deep. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 45 minutes. Or pour batter into well greased muffin tins and bake in 350 degrees F. oven about 20 minutes. When cool, remove the cake from the pans and smooth the following icing on top:

Diamonds of frosted gingerbread go high hat with luscious marshmallows.

Butter Icing
Four tablespoons butter, 1/2 cups confectioner's sugar, 1 1/2 teaspoons milk or cream, 1/2 teaspoon lemon extract, 1/4 teaspoon vanilla.
Cream butter and sugar well. Add liquid and flavoring and stir until smooth. Spread on cakes. This icing requires no cooking, and is very easy to make.

Cut the cakes from side to side so that pieces in diamond shapes will be the result. Top each piece with one marshmallow to represent a high hat. If the cake has been baked in muffin tins, frost each cake with the icing and then place a marshmallow on top. Here's another pleasant oddity. Dates and fresh limes, nuts and orange go into one jam recipe.

Date Line Jam
One package pasteurized dates, 3 cups water, 3/4 cup sugar, 1 orange, 1/2 cup chopped nuts, 1/2 cup fresh lime juice.
Pit and chop dates. Add water and cook until soft. Add lime juice, peel of orange in very thin slices and sugar. Cook slowly until a jam-like consistency and orange is tender, (about 35 minutes). Add nuts just before removing from fire. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

Kroger Stores to Have Anniversary

Will Feature Arkansas Products in Four-Week Sale

Celebrating ten years in Arkansas Kroger stores of the Little Rock branch are staging a four-week sale in which products of the state will be featured according to Cecil Dennis, manager of the local Kroger store.

During the "10 Years in Arkansas" sale, Kroger stores will spotlight products for which the state is famous. These will include numerous items Kroger buys in quantities to sell in other states, such as rice, spinach, apples, fresh meats, cottonseed shortening and canned vegetables, Dennis said.

Kroger expenditures in Arkansas last year totaled more than $2,400,000, of which $1,332,000 was spent for commodities manufactured or grown in the state.

Rents paid Arkansas landlords in 1937 totaled $82,669; wages to Kroger employees in the state amounted to $589,720; and the state and local taxes accounted for $132,564, an average of approximately $1,300 per store.

More than $169,358 was spent for store fixtures, remodeling and heating the stores.

Advertising expenditures in the state last year reached a total of $95,976, the greater part of which was spent for newspaper space.

In the last three years the Kroger company has participated in more than 20 Producer-Consumer sales designed to help sell surplus farm crops. Arkansas farmers were vitally interested in a number of these drives.

During National Rice Week in March 1938, Kroger purchased large quantities of fine Arkansas rice. This was displayed prominently in Kroger stores throughout the middlewest and featured in their advertising Kroger is one of the largest distributors of Arkansas rice, selling through its stores more than 6,000,000 pounds, or approximately 200 solid carloads in 1937.

This year Arkansas spinach, grown and packed in the Fort Smith area, was awarded the Kroger Food Foundation seal of approval. Since then it has been marketed in increasing quantities under the famous Country Club label in more than 4,000 Kroger stores.

Arkansas peaches were given wide distribution and valuable advertising this year when Kroger representatives purchased 40,000 bushels of fancy Elbertas for sale in Arkansas and neighboring states. Previously Kroger purchased about 2,000 bushels a year.

Other Producer-Consumer sales in which Kroger stores participated were on such items as Arkansas eggs, apples, watermelons and grapes.

More than 10,000 people have been killed and more than 15,000 injured during air raids in Loyalist Spain, since the Spanish war began.

Wholesome Appetites for Old Favorite Gone Natty

Nut doughnuts, a pitcher of cider, an open fire and friends—what more can the evening give?

Doughnuts make the world go 'round. The temperature of the fat you fry them in should be between 360 and 370 degrees F., and the cooking time no more than 3 minutes. A different recipe helps to keep things rolling along merrily, too.

The Women's Assembly of Pilgrim Church in Duluth, Minn., gives this recipe in their church cook book.

Duluth Doughnuts
(About 2 dozen)

One cup hot mashed potatoes, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 cup sugar, 1/2 cup milk, 2 eggs beaten separately, salt 3 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, nutmeg or grated orange rind. Sift together flour, salt, spice, and baking powder. Beat yolks and whites separately. Beat sugar into beaten yolks. Cream butter. Combine yolks, and sugar, whites and butter, and beat in mashed potatoes.

Add dry ingredients alternately with milk, stirring until all ingredients are thoroughly mixed. Turn out on floured board, shape, roll 1/4 inch thick and cut with floured doughnut cutter. Fry in deep fat for about 3 minutes until lightly browned, turning when they rise to top. Drain on absorbent paper.

Nut Doughnuts
(About 2 dozen)
Three and one-half cups sifted flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg, 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs well beaten, 2 tablespoons melted shortening, 1 cup milk, 3/4 cup sliced Brazil or hazel nuts.

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and spices. Add sliced nuts and set aside until needed. Gradually add sugar to eggs, beating until light. Add shortening. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk, stirring lightly until ingredients are combined.

Turn on lightly floured board and shape. Roll and cut. Fry in hot, deep fat. Note: This is a very soft dough and needs careful handling but the less flour added during rolling and cutting the better the doughnuts when fried.

A SIMPLE SUPPER FOR THANKSGIVING DAY

WHY not plan to make your Thanksgiving supper a "kitchen party"? Plan a simple menu, to be served "help-yourself-style" in the kitchen.

Appetites which have been completely satisfied with a delicious turkey dinner at noon, for the evening meal demand something refreshing, something tart, and something cold and crisp.

Tomato jelly salad on a bed of raw spinach leaves, a basket of hard rolls, a platter of cold turkey, a bowl of crisp relishes on ice, and a fresh fruit dessert, make a happy combination.

Big black olives, radish roses, celery curls, and carrot sticks, served in a huge bowl heaped high with crystal-clear cubes of ice, make a fitting start for such a meal. If you've a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator, you can have all the ice cubes you want, in just a few minutes time. Just put the easy-to-use cubes on the block of ice in your refrigerator and in 5 minutes or less you'll have sparkling, taste-free cubes to keep relishes cold and crisp, or to chill food beverages. The tart tomato jelly salad, served with cold turkey and crusty buttered rolls, makes a satisfying meal.

Salad, vegetables, and fruit for this Kitchen Party can be prepared the day before Thanksgiving, and stored in a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator. The properly moist, clean-washed, circulating air in these new refrigerators keeps vegetables fresh and crisp, the foods retain their individual flavor. Kitchen parties are easy and a world of fun for hostess as well as guests, if you'll plan menus that permit beforehand preparations, and foods that are simple to serve.

RAISING A FAMILY

By Olive Roberts Barton Pushing Child to Study Hard May End in Holding Him Back

About study. What a problem it is. Here are two ways of regarding it. One is to insist on the student getting high marks, and thus discouraging him when he fails; the other is to take a more lenient attitude. The boy or girl will absorb enough knowledge to be of some help, so say such parents, and let it go at that. All my life I have been trying to make these two extremes meet. I still do not know the best attitude to take regarding effort put into lessons. There is something to be said for both sides.

Most of us look back upon misspent years. "Oh, if we had only known at the time what an opportunity we had to learn and learn more," we cry, "how much harder we should have dug into our books." It all seemed so unimportant at the moment. Something just wished on us like a lot of other unpleasant duties, to be shirked and forgotten as soon as possible.

Hindsight Enthusiasm. With this regret in mind, or perhaps the sorrow of no education at all, we try to infuse some of our late-gained enthusiasm into our young adolescents. "You'll be sorry," we remind them, "if you don't make hay while the sun shines. Everything you learn now will be of great use, and everything you miss will be one big everlasting regret."

And these youngsters gaze upon us calmly and say to themselves, "Where have we heard that before?" You see, it is impossible to wish our convictions on youth. Youth never learns from OUR experience. They, like generations before them, have to learn from their own experience. Too late, they in turn will say to their children, "What a pity I did not study and find out all there was to know."

A Book a Day By Bruce Catton

Fearless Fighter Much Maligned

The slanders of 150 years are wiped away and an "eagle forgotten" shines forth with new light in Frank Smith's biography of the Revolutionary pamphleteer, "Thomas Paine" (Stokes: $3). Paine, avers Mr. Smith, is a figure we would do well to know better in these troubled times. His was a sort of character forged in a long fight against privilege and injustice. Unfortunately, history did not give the man all of his dues.

He became, instead, one of the most maligned figures of all times, says the author. He was burned in effigy, mobbed, called a drunkard and a "filthy little Atheist," a dangerous revolutionary.

But what is the truth? Thomas Paine, says Mr. Smith, was not a drunkard, he was not an Atheist and far from being a dangerous revolutionary he was invariably to be found on the side of moderation. But he was afraid of no man.

There is a legend that Franklin once said, "Where liberty is, there is my country," and Paine replied, "Where liberty is not, there is my country." In any event, his career would seem to bear out the statement for Paine fought for freedom and against oppression on two continents, in France and England and America. His only weapons were his pamphlets, the most famous of which were "Common Sense," "The Rights of Man" and "The Age of Reason."

It is these same pamphlets, says Mr. Smith, that best express what Washington and Jefferson and their contemporaries fought for.—P. G. F.

Anna May Wong Outlines Her Ideas of a Perfect Movie Column

HOLLYWOOD.—Anna May Wong said, "I'll have the eggs in a Riene and the salad supreme. Who in the dickens do you suppose ever sits down and thinks up such names? Chinese names for dishes always explain what's in 'em."

I took the crooners' mixed grill and the potatoes Colbert. Then I asked Miss Wong whether she now thinks of herself as an Oriental or as an American woman, or perhaps just as an international actress. "That's the question that sent me packing off to China," said the Los Angeles-born Chinese.

Went to China and Loved It. "I found myself in the middle of subconscious conflicts. I wondered whether I was losing my racial instincts, and whether I wanted to lose them. Hollywood is the most hectic place in the world, and no good for making up one's mind. I thought that going to China would help me decide—either I'd love it or I'd be reconciled to the western world. I loved it. It was a great emotional thrill."

An American institution that Miss Wong can't get used to is the gossip column dealing with who's romancing or about to divorce whom. "So much is untrue!" she exclaimed. "They said I was engaged to Philip Ahn, the Korean actor. He's terribly self-conscious about it."

Here's What Anna Would Write About

I asked Miss Wong what she'd write if she were a Hollywood correspondent, and she said she'd write more about acting and less about off-screen personalities. "So much attention to their own personalities makes actors believe they are more important than their characterizations," she continued. "You can think of several stars who always try to play themselves on the screen, and who'd lay an egg in character parts."

"Now, in this last picture, 'King of Chinatown,' I was a woman doctor, and I tried to handle it objectively and I believe I was freer than ever before. If I succeeded in getting into that character, maybe I would have different slants on things than ordinary Anna May Wong would have."

"And did it work out that way?" "Partly," said Miss Wong. "For instance, I arranged to watch a major operation so that I could get a better idea of my role. A hard-boiled press agent went with me, and he kept asking if I could stand it all right. I found that I really didn't mind it. But right in the middle of the operation, the press agent turned kind of green and said, 'This is where I came in,' and he had to leave."

Rushes Tell Truth to Lousy Actors. Akim Tamiroff was passing our table and Miss Wong called to him. She said, "Now here is a fine actor who can talk about acting, but who hates to talk about himself." He had been to see some rushes. "You never see a bad actor on the stage improve as much as a bad actor on the screen," he observed. "The stage actor hears his friends say he is good, and he believes them. When people say I am good, I go to see the rushes and perhaps find I am really lousy. So I try to correct my mistakes."

"Mr. Tamiroff works harder than most of us," said Miss Wong. "He gets a script weeks before a picture and studies his new character."

"Of course," said the actor. "On the stage, you rehearse for a month and gradually get the feeling of living the part. But here, they tell you: 'Come to the set Monday and you will play the part of Mr. Smith.' It is frightening! How could I be Smith if I didn't know what Smith does and says and how he feels?"

Tracy "Underplaying" Most Effective. The short, shaggy Tamiroff went on to declare that one of the big troubles with movies is "underplaying," which is something of a vague now. "You take a great actor like that Spencer Tracy—when he underplays a scene it is effective because the audience feels that he is full inside with feelings and is resisting himself to keep his emotions under control."

"But when an ordinary actor underplays a scene, he just doesn't do anything. He is empty. The audience thinks he does not care."

Later, when we were the last ones leaving the restaurant, Miss Wong said, "That's the sort of thing I meant when I said you should write more about acting."
